"YANKEE DOODLE."

A SHORT SKETCH OF THIS FAMOUS PAINTING.

How, After Many Unsuccessful Attempts, Mr. Willard Formulated the Leading Idea of the Creation—A Pen Picture of the Central Figure—Their True Identity.

One of the most familiar pictures to America, and one that has done as much as any other to kindle patriotism is "Yankee Doodle," or "The Spirit of '76." This picture was first seen in the art department of the Philadelphia centennial in 1876, and provoked the praise of the whole nation and of foreign critics as well. The artist who painted this picture was Archibald M. Willard of Cleveland.

Success for July gives an interesting sketch of Mr. Willard and the genesis of his painting. Mr. Willard was fortunate in having as a friend Mr. Joseph F. Ryder, a photographer of Cleveland, who had a keen artistic instinct. Mr. Ryder greatly encouraged him by helping him to sell many of his patriotic and humorous sketches to old soldiers throughout the west, and it was he who suggested "Yankee Doodle." The story as Success gives it runs as follows:

"The centennial year was drawing near.
Mr. Ryder suggested a picture which would embody 'The Spirit of '76,' and Willard set about making a humorous picture. He made sketches after sketch, to no purpose.

"From the first, he singled out the musicians as the central figures, and had determined on three of them. His father was an old man and had appeared in one form or another in a good many of his pictures, as in 'Pitching the Tune,' and had posed as one of the drummers. The other drummer was Harry Devereux, a lad from a military academy. The fifer was a well-known character in Wellington, Hugh Mosher, a man of great artistic possibilities whom Mr. Ryder often photographed in many attitudes.

"While Willard was at work, his father was taken sick, and after a lingering illness died. During his illness, caring for him much by day and night, Willard struggled to finish his picture.

"One day there came an inspiration.
He had been working with noble models.
He had really a noble theme. To make a merely humorous picture was unworthy his ambition. From the sublime to the ridiculous was easy; he would leap from the ridiculous to the sublime. He would change these rustic soldiers from the parade ground to the battlefield, and make his picture one of noble patriotism.

"He made another sketch and with wonderful effect. From this time the work became absorbing. He was at his masterpiece. The plan took shape in his mind, and transferred itself to canvas.
In the background is the broken line that has been pressed back by the enemy. But in the foreground are three figures, father, son, and grandson, though Mr. Willard did not think of this relation till the picture was nearly finished. These, with steady strides are marching ahead. They are already at the foremost point that has been reached by the line—a point marked by a wounded man and a broken cannon.
And listen! They are playing 'Yankee Doodle!' The old man's face might be kind elsewhere, but here it is like a flint.
The strong, fier has his wounded head bound up, but blows a clear, high note.
The lad who marches beside him, has his face fixed on the old man's. They are marching alone to death or victory.
Alone? No. Through the smoke, the line is seen reforming. Hats are in the air. Their comrades have caught the tune, and the courage which produced it, and are gathering to support them. One can look through their determined courage to an assured victory.

"Everyone knows the effect of the picture. It electrified the country. It is on sale at every patriotic place where relics are vended to this day. The artist gave up his studio in the quiet country town, and moved to the city, where he still lives. The poor boy who had not even money to buy paints had become one of the most noted artists in the land.

"Mr. Willard has painted many other pictures of note. Another patriotic scene, 'The Minute-man,' is pronounced by many a greater work than 'Yankee Doodle,' but that work touched the popular heart as no other picture has for decades, and to this day Mr. Willard is best known as the painter of 'Yankee Doodle.'—

A McCall Bazar Pattern Free.

Our progressive lady readers will be pleased to learn that we have made arrangements with the McCall Co., of New York, by which we are enabled to give one of their well-known Bazar Patterns to every subscriber of this paper, who either pays arrearsages in subscription or pays one year in advance. These patterns are given our subscribers absolutely free, no charges of any kind, and are sent postage paid, when the subscriber does not call at this office to obtain the premium pattern. We have fashion sheets and illustrations at the office of this paper, showing all the new and popular designs, and we invite our lady friends to call and make a selection of whatever pattern they desire. We consider this offer a very valuable one to our readers, from the fact that the McCall Bazar Pattern is considered by all the leading dressmakers to be the best pattern on the market to-day. Every pattern is placed in an envelope, accompanied by directions that are easily understood by the most inexperienced person, and are guaranteed to be cut accurately.
They will give entire satisfaction in every respect.

We hope that many of our readers will take advantage of this offer and become accustomed to paying for paper promptly in advance; and also be benefited by this liberal offer we are able to make.

In another column appears an advertisement giving full particulars about this offer and these patterns. Read it.

FORTY-THIRD FAIR

HELD AT THE FAIR GROUNDS
LAST WEEK.

An Unusually Large Attendance Despite the Occasional Showers—Though the Track was Heavy, the Horse and Bicycle Races were Closely Contested—The Other Entries Good.

The forty-third annual fair of the Wellington Union Agricultural Society was held last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The weather proved to be unfavorable the second day, but in spite of this there was a surprisingly good attendance. On Friday, the last day, it was estimated that between 2500 and 2700 people were in attendance and the gate receipts on that day alone were nearly $500. The financial outlook for the association is very encouraging, even much more than was expected on account of the inclemency of the weather.

The entries were not quite as numerous as in former years, but the condition of the stock and quality of all material were far above the average.

The floral hall was very artistically arranged with the articles brought by numerous firms for exhibition which reflected great credit upon the management.

The merchants' hall was occupied by J. M. Otterbacher with a fine display; W.
E. Peirce with samples of stoves and Dr. R. G. Holland with his Medicated Salt. The east side of the hall was filled with a fine line of all kinds of vegetables.

The band boys furnished some fine music during both days.

The fair is considered by the association as a financial success and had the weather been good on the second day, the proceeds would have been a great deal larger.

The Horse Races.

The horse races were well attended and were under the superintendence of L. H. Wadsworth. J. H. Pringle, of Cardington, acted as starter, and O. P.
Chapman, J. H. O'Brien and R. C. Horas judges, with E. D. Snyder and F. A.
Giberson, as timers. Owing to the condition of the track on Thursday, the three-year-old stake race was postponed until Friday. The races were hotly contested and the attendance large, the grand stand being filled to its capacity.

The summary of the races is as follows:

Bicycle Races.

The wheel races advertised to come off on Thursday morning were necessarily postponed until Friday at 11 o'clock, owing to the condition of the track.

Many valuable prizes were carried away, among them being a diamond pin, Gerald Williams, our star rider, winning it by capturing the five-mile handicap, with Davis, of Cleveland, as second.

A good crowd witnessed the races and all seemed well satisfied with the outcome. The result was as follows:

One-mile handicap, boys under 17 years.—First, Geo. Hiller, prize, diamond pin; second, Will Lamoreaux, prize, bicycle shoes. Time 2:46.

Two-mile lap.—First, Robbins, six points, prize, gold watch, $20; second, West, three points, prize, blanket, $2.50; third, Hiller, three points. Time 6:11.

Five-mile handicap.—First, Williams, prize, diamond pin, $25; second, Daves, prize, pair Hartford tires, $3.50. Time 14:55.

One-mile open.—First, Robbins, prize, gold watch, $15; second, West, prize, Baldwin chain, $3.50. Time 2:47.

The Wheat Crop.

The wheat crop of the northwest now being harvested is one of the largest ever gathered, and as other parts of the world have also yielded well of this cereal the supply will be ample and the price in the western markets will probably be about sixty cents. This is not quite so good a price as the consumer can afford, but the farmer can make a profit even at that price. When the price of wheat gets much above a dollar, as it did recently, the wages of the consumers in the city need a raise to suit the new conditions.
